Urban Transport XVII Urban Transport and the Environment in the 21st Century contains the edited version of most of the papers presented at the 17th International Conference on Urban Transport and the Environment, held June 6-8, 2011, in Pisa, Italy. The conference was the latest in a well-established annual series that began in 1995 and examines how transport and traffic affect the urban environment, as well as safety, security and efficiency. Transport developments and innovations have been part of the evolution of human culture through all the different stages of the growing complexity of economic and social relationships. During the past centuries, freight transport and military logistics have developed jointly with commercial exchanges and the growth of cities and nations, with the control of transportation affecting economic power. The proceedings of the conference series help to meet the need for thoroughly tested and evaluated improvements in urban transport systems and for systems that are compatible with a healthier environment.
