The Yoxford Boys: The 357th Fighter Group on Escort over Europe and Russia Merle C. Olmsted
The story of the 357th Fighter Group stationed in the village of Yoxford, East Anglia, England. This new series, created by aviation authority Kenn C. Rust, gives everyone interested in World War II aviation an intimate "look-see" at the real air action through the eyes of the men who were there. No other books like these are available in the world today. Each tells a different part of the combat story as it happened to one particular group via an absorbing text, many rare and high quality photos, and excellent tone scale drawings by top aviation artists Joh Preston and Paul Matt.
