Do you feel that it's becoming more difficult to meet the needs of all the levels of learners in your classroom? More and more, teachers need to adapt lesson plans to meet the different learning styles of each child. Some students are visual learners, while others might be auditory, for example. Discovering Differentiation offers teachers concrete ways to meet individual students' needs by supplying lesson plans for auditory, visual, musical, linguistic and bodily kinesthetic learners.

This book offers a variety of lessons on crucial language arts elements such as writing, reading, speaking, listening, vocabulary and grammar. Some of these lessons emphasize student choice, while others leave it for the teacher to decide what work is appropriate for the student. Discovering Differentiation is the perfect choice for teachers who do not want to reinvent the wheel, but want to learn to differentiate by using concrete lessons.
