Righteous Among Nations: How Poles Helped the Jews, 1939-1945

This book is about the help given by the Polish people to the victims of the Nuremberg laws when the Nazis occupied their country. At the outbreak of World War II, Poland had a larger Jewish population than any other country in the world. According to the latest census, three and a half million citizens had registered as practising Jews, and this number alone constituted more than a tenth of the total population of Poland. Further, there were about a hundred thousand members of Christian Churches whose Jewish origin was sufficient to condemn them in the eyes of the Nazis. Jewish historians give different estimates of the number of Jews who managed to survive the German occupation of Poland. The figures range from between forty or fifty thousand to a hundred or a hundred and twenty thousand. Only a very small portion survived the war in concentration camps, labour camps and prisoner of war camps. The remaining survivors owed their lives to the Polish people, to the guerillas and private individuals who concealed and succoured them.
